

119. His only anxiety was lest he would be transferred before he had finished the road he was building.
120. People are so different at home from what they are abroad, there they are easy, cordial and have good nature.
121. Up to 150,000 British manufacturing jobs will be lost this year as the world economic downturn force companies to slash spending, the Engineering Employers' Federation warned yesterday.
122. Leading shares were dragged lower, with the Dow Jones Industrial Average sink from 292.6 to 9,485.3.
123. Euro-zones retail organizations are to promote prices in euros rather than national currencies in the months before the change-over to euro notes and coins.
124. British Chief scientist is today expecting to tell Tony Blair that the government's mass slaughter of livestock is beginning to have an impact on the spread of foot-and-mouth disease.
125. A grossly negligible South African was jailed for driving a bus that crashed on a mountain road in 1999, killing 27 elderly British tourists.
126. UK-based RoboScience launched the labrador-sized RS-01 Robodog - the world strongest and largest commercial legged robot.
127. What is claimed to be the world's first cordless internet radio, the H100 device from Ericsson, utilizes Bluetooth technology "and represents a revolutionary step in bringing internet audio wireless into the home".
128. Throughout the day, cars roll off the production line at the Betim - Fiat's largest outside Italy - are driven over a crumpled surface to test durability.
129. Most organs are suspended from the skeleton and this allows them to function free without becoming entangled or crushing each other.
130. The human brain is more than twice as large as that of any other anthropoid and give humans their great powers of learning and problem solving.
131. It was clear that the Russian leader, ever the tough pragmatist, had decided he had more to gain from engagement with the new US administration than by rejecting its overtures for a new broad-base relationship.
132. The much-vaunted Secure Digital Music Initiative, set up in 1999, has not even managed to set a preliminary standards for digital watermarking technology, that tags pieces of music with a unique identifier.
133. With the copying of files on the Internet so easily done, especially using peer-to-peer distribution services as Napster and Gnutella, the time is ripe for technologies that protect the rights of content owners.
134. Russia hopes that the spectacle of improved political relations in the top, coupled with Russia's own efforts at reforms, will encourage US companies to invest more readily.
135. Those good intentions maybe tested by the threat of dissonance between competition authorities in Brussels and Washington over the proposed merger between General Electric and Honeywell of the US.
136. Diphtheria, measles, chicken-pox, suppurative lymph glands, chills, appendiceal abscess, or almost any infection in the body may be responsible for nephritis, for tonsillitis, septic sore throat, and otitis media are main predisposing diseases.

137. Evidently, individual investors had dipped into new economy stocks, in a "frantic mood to play the market", than view stocks as longer term investments.
138. Britain's pot-holed roads have been blamed for 50% increase in accident against local authorities in a study being published today.
139. A whispering "Damn!" broke the silence as she dropped the key-ring at her feet.
140. ST microchips are in one-third of all new cars, making cars more beautiful and safe, and putting some of the pure fun back into driving.
141. Dr Goodman stopped the oxygen, thinking that maybe the miocardium was particularly sensitive to the high oxygen levels that were in the blood; later he admitted that this should have been a mistake as well.
142. It was a pleasant gift shop, populated and run by gracefully aged suburbanite women dressed in cute pink smocks.
143. She needed no cap; her naturally curly red hair was short and combed easily into a soft halo when they were wet.
144. InterTrust is compatible with all music players including the popular WinAmp; however, it does not currently work with Windows Media files, the format championing by Microsoft.
145. She was enormously enjoying her fourth martini; she glowed inside like brightest globe on the twelve-foot Christmas tree that almost touched the oak-beamed ceiling.
146. Again she wanted to leave before something happened and she asked the simplest of questions to which she would undoubtedly have to answer a demoralizing "I don't know".
147. The Irish referendum, which was held 10 days ago and delivered an embarrassing No vote to the EU Treaty of Nice, showed how difficult it is to persuade voters get out and vote in favor of the European project.
148. Her room, on the Bay side of the house, was spacy and charming, with a fireplace all its own.
149. Susan grasped Nancy's hand as she were shaking it and slowly flexed and extended the wrist; there was no resistance.
150. Most of the boats that had been around them all day had disappeared, and the water seemed to be their alone.
151. In an individual with a fistula of the pancreatic duct's secretion of the pancreatic juice began two or three minutes after he was told about the meal he was to receive.
152. When a dog or cat feels cold, it curls itself up and reduces in its way the surface of heat loss; in hot surroundings the animal, in contrast, takes a position in which the surface of heat loss grows to maximum.
153. "These events are disappointing, but the important thing is the inquiry has brought lots of information into the public domain that prosecutors can now use," said Antonio Afif, a sports industry consultant.
154. The medical report showed the cold, hard facts: until beautiful young widow, Jan Tracey, risked a dangerous operation, her heart would give out within two years.
155. All the stores had stayed open till nine tonight; there was only a few minutes past.