

119. His only anxiety was lest he would be transferred before he had finished the road he was building.
A B C D
120. People are so different at home from what they are abroad, there they are easy, cordial and have good nature.
A B C D
121. Up to 150,000 British manufacturing jobs will be lost this year as the world economic downturn force companies to slash spending, the Engineering Employers' Federation warned yesterday.
A B C D
122. Leading shares were dragged lower, with the Dow Jones Industrial Average sink from 292.6 to 9,485.3.
A B C D
123. Euro-zones retail organizations are to promote prices in euros rather than national currencies in the months before the change-over to euro notes and coins.
A B C D
124. British Chief scientist is today expecting to tell Tony Blair that the government's mass slaughter of livestock is beginning to have an impact on the spread of foot-and-mouth disease.
A B C D
125. A grossly negligible South African was jailed for driving a bus that crashed on a mountain road in 1999, killing 27 elderly British tourists.
A B C D
126. UK-based RoboScience launched the labrador-sized RS-01 Robodog - the world strongest and largest commercial legged robot.
A B C D
127. What is claimed to be the world's first cordless internet radio, the H100 device from Ericsson, utilizes Bluetooth technology "and represents a revolutionary step in bringing internet audio wireless into the home".
A B C D
128. Throughout the day, cars roll off the production line at the Betim -
Fiat's largest outside Italy - are driven over a crumpled surface to test durability.
A B C D