

90. Although the production of the^A 41-year-old Mini ceases this autumn, the company is planning a replacement^B for the old Rover 100 as well as^C Mg-badge^D versions of its 25, 45 and 75 models.
91. Computers will formulate balanced rations for pigs and poultry at minimum cost^A, the proteins being partly supplied^B by the mechanical breakdown of plant cells^C or by material synthesis^D by micro-organisms.
92. The hedges, which take up^A a considerable fraction^B of English arable soil^C, help to maintain the like-park^D appearance of the country.
93. The crops^A will be protected against^B pests and diseases from the seed to harvest^C, largely by^D insecticides and fungicides.
94. This love of the garden is holy, and it proves that the Englishman^A is at heart^B a lover of beautiful^C, though he is supposed to be a dull^D, practical person.
95. The indisputed^A hegemony of ball games over all other forms of physical skill^B was challenged by^C the new race of physical education specialists^D who began to appear in schools a generation ago.
96. There is a contrast between day and boarding school^A not only in the time^B during^C which prefects are on duty, but in the nature^D of their work.
97. A reading room for medical students was opened^A there as far back as^B in the year^C 1885 and constant and increasing use of it has been made ever^D since.
98. Today the University of London has much the same^A form of organization adopted to accommodate^B its increased size and complexity^C.